Having been born and raised in New York, my boisterous Big Apple personality has stuck with me despite being more than 2 decades removed from the city. And while, at times, I might talk a little loud or be a tad extroverted, it comes from a place of not just wanting to ensure my voice is heard, but because I'm a strong and passionate advocate for the clients whose integrations I support.

Reflecting during my entire career, I've never been as happy as I am now. My joy comes from being able to tap into my years of experience, the satisfaction I gain from helping to move projects forward, and being a part of a team who really does care about its clients and each other.
