

Amit
is there.

“Start being comfortable with being uncomfortable.”

One constant throughout my 20-year career has been change. I've held roles from processing to leadership in our Atlanta laboratory. The variation of my work has fueled my desire to find better solutions and also encouraged me to look inward. Today, instead of simply accepting change, I challenge those around me to become the change and push each other to innovate.

Inspiring people to innovate is like adding yeast to bread. Yeast starts as a small ingredient, but completely transforms the structure of the dough. Our yeast is reflected in how we listen, how we communicate, and how we harness the power of change to create the most efficient laboratory possible.
