Even after more than 25 years with Quest Diagnostics, the amount of knowledge we gain through the work we do here continues to strengthen the pride I have in our company.

We consistently teach our employees how to promote a unified process for handling sensitive donor information. I've been a firsthand witness of the evolution of a laboratory committed to world-class collections, processing, and testing of drugs of abuse.

My typical day is spent ensuring our staff understands the responsibility bestowed upon us by clients who trust that we will deliver on our promise of being there when they need us. Through this process of teaching, I learn something new every day.
