On my first day at Quest Diagnostics, I was greeted by a diverse and ornate display of country flags representing the company's pride in having the best employees in the world. In that moment I knew this company, my company, was different. That first impression stayed with me, and years later I can attest to how much value we place on diversity, community, and a dedication to fostering an empowered workforce.

Our culture enables us to do the right thing on behalf of our customers, so that our interactions avoid becoming rigid and unwavering, but instead remain flexible and adaptive to the situation. It is this dedication to embracing the differences and uniqueness of each situation that allows us to continuously be there for our clients.
