If you work for me, I expect you to smile or laugh at least once a day. Because our team is deeply connected, I know there are consequences for our customers if one of our team members does not feel confident about what they do or why they do it. Sometimes we need to take a step back, evaluate our demeanor, and find our collective center. I champion individualism and celebrate the complexity of each person on my team; they are the ones on the front lines creating successful experiences for our clients. I simply provide my team with the tools to be in the right state of mind.

As a result, our relationships are nurtured, strengthened, and built to withstand the demands of our own expectations. We have the mindset of small business owners and come into work determined to take care of what we've built. We have immense pride in what we do and who we are. Being in sync with each other further enables us to truly be there for our customers, and hopefully, make them smile, too.
