If you ask me to describe my family with one word it would be “givers” because we value public service. My dad is a police officer, my mom is a school teacher, and several family members serve in the military. At an early age, I worked as a short order cook and quickly realized my ability to expedite and that I wanted a career where I could give back too.

Decades later, I have successfully blended my talents and passion for giving back through my work at Quest. I no longer manage hotdogs and hamburgers, but as a group lead in our Norristown, PA lab, I help to prioritize work while maintaining the highest standards of quality. We give back by treating people right, being fair, and pursuing worthwhile work. It is a blessing to know that our laboratory makes a difference in the world.
